The foundation of your tribunal success

I am originally from Malawi, Africa. I studied and worked in Britain and Nigeria, West Africa, as a Professor of Politics. In both Africa and Britain, I served on many committees and agencies.

My political activism meant I lived in exile, hence my abiding interest from a young age in human rights, justice, accountability and transparency. Since coming to Canada, 25 years ago, I have worked to understand and integrate into Canadian life. I have travelled to 31 of 33 NWT communities and worked on many boards and agencies.

My life and work experiences on three continents permit a unique tolerance and understanding of the challenges people have in difficult environments. I believe this experience also allows me to work readily in many diverse settings.
